Foreword

The growth of serious and violent delinquency in our Nation and its impact on our schools concerns us all. Every day, many children face fighting and other intimidating behavior at school or on the way to and from school. In addition to the cost to children and their families, school violence may have broad and long lasting effects on society because it disrupts education and diminishes students' sense of security in their learning environment. Clearly then, providing safe schools is one of our most important responsibilities. Children must feel safe and nurtured in school, and they must be challenged to learn rather than challenged to survive.

Maintaining safe schools requires the forging of partnerships to share information between schools and youth-serving agencies, including the police department, court system, youth parole and probation offices, and child protective services. These partnerships rely on effective information sharing among all the agencies responsible for delivering services to children. Educators who see the first warning signs of delinquency or who have critical information about juveniles involved in the juvenile justice system can, by sharing information with other justice and youth-serving agencies, help develop effective intervention strategies. At the other end of the spectrum, when the juvenile justice system is about to send an alleged or adjudicated juvenile offender back into the regular school system, justice officials should notify the school of the timing and circumstances of the student's return so the school can take steps to provide needed support services to help the student succeed. In addition, there are other circumstances in which it is both appropriate and necessary to share information to ensure public safety and the welfare of our children.

This guide is for educators, law enforcement personnel, juvenile justice professionals, and community leaders who are interested in developing interagency information sharing agreements to fully involve the schools in a holistic approach to intervention and delinquency prevention. Educators and other youth-serving professionals will find clear directions here on how to share information while complying with the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act.

It is our hope that this guide will be useful as communities and schools across America work to provide safe havens for learning for our children.

Introduction

In an era of scarce resources and alarming juvenile violence, all agencies serving children and families need to maximize their ability to share information so they can coordinate their services to make them more effective. When State and local agencies begin to implement comprehensive strategies for addressing juvenile delinquency, the cooperation of schools in sharing information about students is critical to the success of these efforts. Educators hold a unique position of influence in the children's lives. Consequently, the Nation's schools can be invaluable partners with the juvenile justice and other systems—including the social service, health, and mental health systems—as they seek to serve the needs of those students at high risk for delinquency. No student's needs should be neglected—and no school community should go unprotected—because of confusion over the extent of the right to privacy.

Educators typically approach participation in agency information sharing programs with caution because they have legitimate concerns about the privacy of students and their families. To a large extent, their caution reflects an awareness of legal restrictions on information sharing. All public elementary and secondary schools are subject to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) (20 U.S.C. § 1232g), a Federal law that governs the disclosure of information from education records. Some States have similar privacy and confidentiality laws that also address the issue of sharing information from education records.

This guide provides basic information on FERPA for elementary and secondary education professionals and those involved in delivery of services to juveniles, including those students involved in the juvenile justice system. The information in the guide makes it clear that FERPA need not be an impedment to full participation by educators in their community's efforts to serve the needs of juveniles. Educators and those providing services to our children share a common ultimate goal: to see all children grow and thrive in safe homes, schools, and communities and become healthy, productive members of society.

The guide provides an overview of FERPA, discusses the Act's restrictions on information sharing and exceptions to those restrictions, explains recordkeeping requirements under the Act, and summarizes recent changes to the regulations for implementing FERPA. Examples are provided to illustrate some key points. The guide also explores the role of multiagency agreements in facilitating information sharing and looks at one effective program that relies on such agreements. Sources of technical assistance are given in the guide, including a brief summary of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention's (OJJDP's) information sharing initiatives. For convenient reference, the FERPA regulations are included in appendix A. In addition, four appendixes (B through E) present information for schools, other youth-serving agencies and organizations, and the juvenile justice and related systems to use in developing a juvenile justice network that will enable them to work together to address the problems of youth who are delinquent or at risk of becoming delinquent.

Although portions of the guide may also be of interest to educators at colleges and universities, the issues specific to that audience are beyond the scope of this work. Educators of postsecondary institutions should examine the text and regulations of FERPA independently and seek additional sources for guidance.

Information Sharing Between Schools and Other Youth-Serving Agencies Under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) is a complex Federal law that protects the privacy interests of parents and students with regard to education records. It affects every public elementary and secondary school and virtually every postsecondary institution in the country. First enacted in 1974, FERPA has been amended by Congress seven times, most recently through the Improving America's Schools Act of 1994 (IASA).

FERPA defines the term "education records" broadly to include all records, files, documents, and other materials, such as films, tapes, or photographs, containing information directly related to a student that an education agency or institution or a person acting for the agency or institution maintains. For example, education records include information that schools maintain on students in report cards, surveys and assessments, health unit records, special education records, and correspondence between the school and other entities regarding students. Education records also include information that a school maintains about parents.

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA—Jane

Jane, 10, has been reported to the child protective services agency as a possible sex abuse victim. The agency contacts Jane's teachers to determine if Jane has exhibited any unusual behavior. FERPA permits Jane's teachers to share information about their observations regarding Jane. Oral information based on personal observation or knowledge is not subject to the provisions of FERPA.

Generally, FERPA gives parents the right to inspect and review their children's education records, request amendment of the records, and have some control over the disclosure of information from the records. When a student turns 18 or enters college, FERPA classifies him or her as an "eligible student" and transfers the rights under the Act from the parent to the student. FERPA requires school districts to notify parents and eligible students annually of their rights under the Act. (See appendix B for a sample notification document.)

The recent IASA amendments to FERPA enhanced the penalty for improperly disclosing information from education records. FERPA now prohibits a school from providing information for at least 5 years to a third party who received information and redisclosed it without the required consent.

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA—Ryan (Part I)

Ryan, 13, is adjudicated delinquent for breaking into a warehouse. As this is his first offense, the court returns Ryan to school and shares information about the offense with the school. FERPA does not govern the decision by local juvenile justice system officials to divulge this information to the schools. Schools may receive and use information from law enforcement, courts, and other justice system components in order to provide services to Ryan and to maintain a safe and effective learning environment. However, once the information on Ryan is received and maintained by the school, it is subject to FERPA and exceptions.

The Prior Consent Requirement for Disclosure of Education Records

For elementary or secondary school students, FERPA restricts the release of their school records or information from their records that could identify the student (“personally identifiable information”). Before releasing such records or information to a party outside the school system, the school must obtain the consent of the student’s parents unless the student is 18 or over, in which case only the student can consent to the release, or unless the release falls under one of the exceptions to the consent requirement.

Educators are free to share information with other agencies or individuals concerning students based on their personal knowledge or observation, provided the information does not rely on the contents of an education record. Oral referrals to other agencies based on personal observations are not subject to the provisions of FERPA. Of course, the process of interagency information sharing is a dynamic process, and educators should take care not to circumvent the requirements of FERPA by making a referral that is predicated on knowledge obtained from education records.

Exceptions to the Prior Consent Requirement

Statutory exceptions applicable to the prior consent requirement are set forth in detail under § 99.31 of the FERPA regulations. As a general rule, educators may disclose information without prior consent if they can answer yes to any of the following questions.

Is the disclosure being made—

- ◆ To other school officials, including teachers, within the school or school district who have been determined to have legitimate educational interests? (A school official has a legitimate educational interest if the official needs to review an education record in order to fulfill his or her professional responsibility.) (See § 99.31(a)(1) of the FERPA regulations.)
- ◆ To officials of another school, school system, or postsecondary institution where the student seeks or intends to enroll? (See § 99.34 of the FERPA regulations.)
- ◆ To authorized representatives of the Comptroller General of the United States, the U.S. Secretary of Education, or State and local education authorities? This exception applies only under certain conditions. Typically, disclosures under this provision must be in connection with an audit or evaluation of a Federal- or State-supported education program or in compliance with Federal legal requirements related to those programs. (See § 99.35 of the FERPA regulations.)
- ◆ In connection with the student’s application for or receipt of financial aid? (See § 99.31(a)(4) of the FERPA regulations.)
- ◆ To State and local officials or authorities in compliance with a State statute that concerns the juvenile justice system and the system’s ability to effectively serve, prior to adjudication, the student whose records are being released? (This condition is discussed further in “Disclosures Under the Juvenile Justice System Exception,” p. 8.) (See § 99.31(a)(5) and § 99.38 of the FERPA regulations.)
- ◆ To organizations conducting studies for, or on behalf of, education agencies or institutions, in order to develop tests, administer student aid, or improve instruction? (See § 99.31(a)(6) of the FERPA regulations.)
- ◆ To accrediting organizations to carry out their accrediting functions? (See § 99.31(a)(7) of the FERPA regulations.)
- ◆ To parents of a dependent student, as defined by the Internal Revenue Code, even if the student is an “eligible student” under FERPA? (See § 99.31(a)(8) of the FERPA regulations.)
- ◆ To comply with a judicial order or lawfully issued subpoena? The regulations direct the school to make a reasonable effort to notify the parent or eligible student of the court order or subpoena in advance of compliance. (See appendix C for sample court orders.) However, the IASA amendments removed this notification requirement for instances in which a court or other agency issues either a Federal Grand Jury subpoena or a subpoena for a law enforcement purpose and the court has ordered the school not to disclose the existence of the subpoena. (See § 99.31(a)(9) of the FERPA regulations.)

- ◆ In connection with a health or safety emergency? (See § 99.31(a)(10) of the FERPA regulations. See also “Disclosures Under the Health or Safety Emergency Exception,” p. 7.)
- ◆ To teachers and school officials in other schools who have legitimate educational interests in the behavior of the student when the information concerns disciplinary action taken against the student for conduct that posed a significant risk to the safety or well-being of that student, other students, or other members of the school community? (See § 99.36 of the FERPA regulations.)
- ◆ To provide information that the school district has designated as “directory information”? (See § 99.37 of the FERPA regulations. See also “Disclosures Under the Directory Information Exception,” p. 7).
- ◆ To provide information from the school’s law enforcement unit records? (See § 99.3 definition of “education records” and § 99.8 of the FERPA regulations. See also “Disclosures Under the Law Enforcement Unit Records Exception,” p. 5).

Four of the exceptions specified above require additional explanation:

- ◆ Disclosures Under the Law Enforcement Unit Records Exception.
- ◆ Disclosures Under the Directory Information Exception.
- ◆ Disclosures Under the Health or Safety Emergency Exception.
- ◆ Disclosures Under the Juvenile Justice System Exception.

Each of these types of disclosures is discussed in the sections that follow.

Disclosures Under the Law Enforcement Unit Records Exception

Under FERPA, schools may disclose information from “law enforcement unit records” to anyone—Federal, State, or local law enforcement authorities, social service agencies, or even the media—without the consent of the parent or eligible student. FERPA specifically exempts from the definition of “education records”—and thereby from the restrictions of FERPA—records that a law enforcement unit of a school or school district creates and maintains for a law enforcement purpose. In some instances, State open records laws may require that schools provide public access to law enforcement unit records because FERPA does not protect these records. (Educators may wish to check with their State attorney general’s office on this point.)

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA—Rodney, Jeff, and Mark (Part I)

A School Resource Officer (SRO) who is a member of the school’s law enforcement unit receives a report from the local police department that Rodney, Jeff, and Mark are active members of the Five Crew gang. The SRO creates a file and places the report in it. The SRO also informs the principal, who makes appropriate notations in each student’s education record. Several weeks later, a detective from a neighboring jurisdiction contacts the SRO. The detective is investigating a rideby shooting involving gangs at a basketball game between the two schools. FERPA does not restrict the SRO from sharing information about the Five Crew members from the law enforcement unit record with the investigator.

A “law enforcement unit” is an individual, office, department, division, or other component of a school or school district—such as a unit of commissioned police officers or noncommissioned security guards—that is officially authorized or designated by the school district to (1) enforce any Federal, State, or local law, or (2) maintain the physical security and safety of schools in the district. Educators may employ commissioned police officers who are responsible for enforcing laws or officially designate an individual in the school district to carry out the responsibilities of a law enforcement unit.

Additionally, some school districts make special arrangements with local law enforcement authorities for the purpose of maintaining safe and drug-free schools. Although the Departments of Justice and Education encourage schools without separate law enforcement units to develop working relationships with local police authorities, compliance with FERPA calls for certain precautions. School districts should use a contract or memorandum of understanding to officially designate a local police officer(s) as the district's law enforcement unit. Without this designation, FERPA would prohibit the school from disclosing information from a student's education records, unless one of the other exceptions to FERPA applies, such as the health or safety exception. Regardless of whether the school district has designated one individual or a group of commissioned officers as the law enforcement unit, the district should include this designation in the annual notification of rights to parents and students under the section concerning the disclosure of information to school officials with a legitimate educational interest in the records. This is so that schools may freely share information about students with their law enforcement units and so that parents and students will know that information from education records may be disclosed for the purpose of maintaining safe schools.

Because this FERPA exemption applies specifically to records that a law enforcement unit creates and maintains for a law enforcement purpose, FERPA would protect records that the law enforcement unit created for a purpose other than law enforcement—even when they are in the possession of the law enforcement unit. On the other hand, even if the law enforcement unit shares with another component of the school a copy of a record the unit created for a law enforcement purpose, FERPA would not restrict dissemination of the records maintained by the law enforcement unit.

Law enforcement unit records should not be confused with the records of a school's disciplinary actions or proceedings, which are education records. Although schools may disclose information from their law enforcement unit to other school officials (including educators in other schools), the copy that the law enforcement unit gives to a principal or other school official becomes an education record once that official receives and maintains it. As such, the information is subject to FERPA and the principal or other official cannot disclose it to a third party without prior parental consent, unless one of the other exceptions to FERPA applies. However, the original document that the law enforcement unit created and maintained, which relates to activity that formed the basis for subsequent disciplinary actions or proceedings, does not become an education record merely because the unit shared it with another component of the school or because a copy is placed in the student's education file. It is, therefore, disclosable like other law enforcement unit records.

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA— Donna and Linda

Donna, 13, and Linda, 14, get into an argument and begin shoving each other. A school resource officer (SRO), who is a member of the school's law enforcement unit, separates them and makes an incident report. Several days later, the SRO again breaks up a fight between the two girls and makes another incident report. Copies of the two incident reports are forwarded from the law enforcement unit to the Assistant Principal who is responsible for school discipline. Because this is the second time the girls have been involved in a fight, they are suspended for a day. The incident reports that provided the basis of the disciplinary hearing and the disposition are entered into each girl's education record. Several days later, Donna and Linda see each other at a neighborhood record store and begin fighting again. The police are called and take the girls into custody. An officer contacts the school SRO and learns that Donna and Linda have gotten into fights at school. While the record of the school discipline hearing is an education record that is subject to FERPA constraints, the incident reports created and maintained by the SRO are disclosable under the law enforcement unit record exception.

It should be noted that nothing in FERPA prevents a school official from disclosing to local law enforcement authorities information that is based on that official's personal knowledge or observation and not from an education record. As long as the reporting of the information does not rely on information contained in education records, FERPA does not restrict the reporting of crime to local law enforcement.

For instance, if a teacher were to observe that a student is involved in a gang or in illegal activities, FERPA would not prevent that teacher from reporting the student to law enforcement authorities. Should the authorities decide to investigate the teacher's observations and need information from the student's education record, they should obtain a subpoena unless circumstances trigger one of the other exceptions under FERPA.

Disclosures Under the Directory Information Exception

A school can disclose "directory information" from the education record without prior parental consent after giving notice of its intention to do so. "Directory information" is information in a student's education records that is not generally considered harmful, and its release is not considered an invasion of the student's privacy. A critical distinction exists between directory information and all other information present in school files. School districts can choose how much directory information from education records they will disclose. Directory information includes, but is not limited to, the following data about the student:

- ◆ Name.
- ◆ Address and telephone.
- ◆ Date and place of birth.
- ◆ Major field of study.
- ◆ Official activities.
- ◆ Dates of attendance ("from and to" dates of enrollment).
- ◆ Height and weight for sports.

- ◆ Degrees and honors received.
- ◆ Most recent previous education institution.
- ◆ Photograph.

The Department of Education considers these items to be directory information. In most instances, disclosure is helpful to both the institution and the student. However, school districts must establish a policy and give notice as to the specific types of directory information they intend to disclose. Parents can, however, retain the right to consent to the disclosure of directory information. Parents who wish to retain this right must so advise the school. (See § 99.3 and 99.37 of the FERPA regulations.)

With the passage of the juvenile justice system exception, discussed on p. 8, education records, including directory information, may be shared with juvenile justice system agencies, prior to adjudication of the student, to the extent that State law allows.

Disclosures Under the Health or Safety Emergency Exception

The health or safety emergency provision is a commonsense acknowledgment that there may be situations when the immediate need for information to avert or diffuse certain unusual conditions or disruptions requires the release of information. Educators determine what constitutes an "emergency," but FERPA requires that they construe the term strictly. For example, on-campus disruptions that constitute criminal acts, particularly those involving weapons and drugs, fall within the scope of the term, as do crisis situations off campus that affect school campuses or the public health or safety. When a health or safety emergency exists, schools may share relevant information about students involved in the emergency with appropriate parties—that is, those whose knowledge of the information is necessary to protect the health or safety of the student or other individuals. (See discussion of recordation requirements on p. 11.)

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA— Rodney, Jeff, and Mark (Part II)

The principal receives information from a student that members of Five Crew are planning an assault at the other high school in retaliation for the previous shooting. Under the emergency exception, the principal can provide information from each student's education record to the appropriate school officials and law enforcement agencies.

Disclosures Under the State Law Juvenile Justice System Exception

FERPA allows schools to play a vital role in a community's efforts to identify children who are at risk of delinquency and provide services prior to a child's becoming involved in the juvenile justice system. The 1994 IASA amendments modified FERPA to permit educators to share information with juvenile justice system agency officials on children who are at risk of involvement or have become involved in the juvenile justice system, prior to adjudication, to the extent State statute allows. System officials to whom the information is disclosed must certify in writing that they will not disclose personally identifiable information to any third party except as provided by State law. Consequently, schools in States with such statutes may disclose information about students to other State and local agencies as part of an effort to serve the student whose records are being released, prior to adjudication. As more and more States establish information sharing programs to serve students through cooperation with the juvenile justice system, the emphasis on neighborhood school participation in interagency information sharing agreements will increase. FERPA need not be a barrier to this progress toward proactive information sharing networks.

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA— Mary

Mary, 13, is arrested for shoplifting. This is her first offense, and the police department's juvenile division contacts the school for information about Mary's school attendance and academic performance. The school can release school attendance, academic performance, or other information from Mary's education record with the consent of one of her parents. If State law authorizes the disclosure to juvenile justice system agencies, the school can share information from Mary's education record without parental consent. Absent such a State law, the school should ask the police department to obtain a subpoena for the records.

The juvenile justice system exception to FERPA's prior written consent provision allows the disclosure of education records, or information from education records, without consent of the parent or eligible student, if four conditions (see § 99.38 of the FERPA regulations) are met:

- (1) The disclosure or reporting of the records must be to a State or local juvenile justice system agency.
- (2) The disclosure must be based on a State statute authorizing the disclosure.
- (3) If the State law was passed after November 19, 1974 (the date FERPA was enacted), the disclosure must relate to the juvenile system's ability to serve, prior to adjudication, the student whose records are being released.
- (4) The State or local officials must certify, in writing, that the institution or individual receiving the personally identifiable information has agreed not to disclose it to a third party, other than another juvenile justice system agency.

Adjudication is the process of determining whether a juvenile has committed an act which, if committed by an adult, would be considered criminal conduct. The process is triggered by a "petition" alleging an act of delinquency. The petition may result in a finding or determination that the juvenile committed the alleged act of delinquency. For the purposes of FERPA, once this finding or determination is made and the court has made a disposition of the case, the juvenile would be considered an “adjudicated delinquent.” The disposition of a delinquency case is the equivalent of a “sentence” in a criminal case.

The fact that a juvenile has been adjudicated delinquent is not, in and of itself, determinative of whether the State law juvenile justice system exception for the release of information that concerns the “juvenile justice system’s ability to effectively serve a student prior to adjudication” is applicable.

If the juvenile justice system seeks the disclosure of information on a student in order to identify and intervene with a juvenile at risk of delinquency, rather than to obtain information solely related to supervision of an adjudicated delinquent, the juvenile could be classified as a preadjudicated delinquent for purposes of this exception. The Secretary of Education believes that each school, working in conjunction with State and local authorities, can best determine whether a release of personally identifiable information from an education record “concerns the juvenile justice system’s ability to effectively serve a student prior to adjudication.” Thus, FERPA gives schools flexibility in determining whether an education record of a juvenile may be released without the prior written consent of the parent.

Florida provides an example of a State law that allows State and local officials to make use of this IASA amendment to FERPA. The State enacted legislation requiring Florida’s Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) to establish an early delinquency intervention program with the cooperation of local law enforcement agencies, the judiciary, district school board personnel, the office of the State’s Attorney, the office of the Public Defender, and community service agencies that work with children.

The Florida law specifies the type of information the cooperating agencies are to share with DJJ and directs specified agencies and persons to develop information sharing agreements within each county. The law states, “Within each county, the sheriff, the chiefs of police, the district school superintendent shall enter into an interagency agreement for the purpose of sharing information about juvenile offenders. . . .The agreement must specify the condi-

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA—Johnny (Part I)

Johnny, 11, is having problems in school. He is inattentive, does not complete homework assignments, falls asleep in class, and is hostile to some of the other children. When the school counselor interviews him, Johnny is sullen and unresponsive. The school counselor makes several unsuccessful attempts to reach the parents. In this situation, the teacher or the counselor can share personal observations with a family services agency but cannot rely on an education record as the source of this personal knowledge of Johnny’s situation. If, however, State law authorizes the disclosure and the receiving entity is a juvenile justice system agency, the teacher or the counselor can, to the extent authorized by State statute, then also use information contained in Johnny’s education record in making the referral. Thus, FERPA gives schools flexibility in determining whether an education record of a juvenile may be released without the prior written consent of the parent.

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA—Johnny (Part II)

Before the counselor can refer Johnny to an appropriate agency, the police department picks him up on the street at 2 a.m. on a school night. No one is home when the police attempt to contact the parents. Johnny spends the night in a temporary foster home, and the police refer his case to family services the next day. During the assessment process, the agency contacts the school and asks for information about Johnny’s attitude and school performance. The school can provide information from Johnny’s education record if at least one of these conditions is met:

- (1) A parent consents, or
- (2) There is a court order or lawfully issued subpoena directing the release of information, or
- (3) A State law authorizes information sharing between educators and juvenile justice agencies.

tions under which summary criminal history information is to be made available to appropriate school personnel, and the conditions under which development records are to be made available to appropriate department personnel.” In addition, the law requires the school district to be notified when a youth is arrested for a felony or a crime of violence. FERPA further requires that juvenile justice system agencies certify in writing that they will not redisclose education records to any third party except as provided by State law.

Recordkeeping Requirements Under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act

A school district must follow certain FERPA recordkeeping requirements. Section 99.32 of the FERPA regulations requires that schools maintain with each student's education records a record of all individuals, agencies, or organizations that requested or obtained access to the student's education records, specifying the legitimate interest that each party had in obtaining the information. Accordingly, educators should document all disclosures of information from a student's education records unless the request is from and the disclosure is to one of the following:

- ◆ The parent or eligible student.
- ◆ A school official within the school system.
- ◆ A party with written consent from the parent or eligible student.
- ◆ A party seeking directory information.
- ◆ A party requesting or receiving the records as directed by a Federal grand jury or other law enforcement subpoena when the issuing court or agency has ordered that no one disclose the existence or the contents of the subpoena or the information furnished in response to the subpoena.

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA—Ryan (Part II)

Ryan, now 14, is adjudicated delinquent for breaking into several vehicles on a parking lot. This is his second offense. As a condition of his probation, the court orders Ryan to attend school regularly and to achieve passing grades in his classes. FERPA does not prevent a school from receiving information about Ryan's status as an adjudicated delinquent. The school, in turn, can assist juvenile probation by providing information from Ryan's education record concerning Ryan's attitude and performance in school. However, because of the fact that Ryan has been adjudicated and the information being sought is solely related to Ryan's status as an adjudicated delinquent, his school can only provide this information if one of the following conditions is met:

- (1) A parent consents, or
- (2) There is a court order or lawfully issued subpoena directing the release of the information.

Administration of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act

The U.S. Department of Education's Family Policy Compliance Office

The Family Policy Compliance Office in the U.S. Department of Education administers FERPA. The Office provides technical assistance on FERPA to education agencies and institutions, State and local officials, and parents. The Office also investigates alleged violations of the law.

Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act Regulations

Another responsibility of the Family Policy Compliance Office is to develop and issue regulations to aid in effective administration of FERPA. On November 21, 1996, the Department of Education published regulations to implement the IASA amendments to FERPA. At the same time, in an effort to reduce the burden on schools and to streamline the complaint procedures, the Department of Education also revised the FERPA regulations to do the following:

- ◆ Give schools greater flexibility by removing the requirement for adoption of a formal written student records policy.
- ◆ Require schools to include additional information in the mandatory annual notification of rights so that parents and students will receive more effective notification of their rights and procedures to pursue them. (A sample notification is included in appendix B.)

- ◆ Clarify FERPA requirements for State education agencies (SEA's) to afford parents access to any education records that SEA's maintain on their children.
- ◆ Clarify what constitutes legal standing to file FERPA complaints with the Department of Education. The complainant must be a parent or an eligible student affected by an alleged violation.
- ◆ Clarify the requirement that a school district make a reasonable effort to notify in advance the parent or student of its intent to disclose information from education records to a court in cases where a school district is initiating legal action against a parent or student.

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act and State Laws

If a school wishes to continue to receive Federal funds, the recipient must comply with FERPA's provisions on the disclosure of education records. (A school district is considered a "recipient" if it receives any funds directly from a program administered by the Secretary of Education or is under the auspices of a State education agency that receives such funds.) Compliance with portions of a State law that conflict with FERPA may jeopardize continued eligibility to receive Federal education funds. If educators believe that a State law conflicts with FERPA, they should bring this to the attention of appropriate State officials.

Multiagency Agreements To Facilitate Cooperation and Information Sharing

Purpose

Multiagency agreements formulated to be consistent with Federal, State, and local laws provide an organizing framework for State and local juvenile justice reform efforts. These agreements are crucial to the development of a juvenile justice network. Typically agencies involved in these agreements provide a wide range of services to juveniles. Parties to such an agreement may be child welfare, mental health, and social services agencies; licensed private community organizations; law enforcement agencies; juvenile courts; district attorney (or State's attorney), probation, corrections, and public defenders offices; and local schools.

Generally, delinquency prevention and intervention, community safety, efficiency, and coordination are the objectives that drive the development of multiagency agreements. More specifically, these objectives may include the following:

- ◆ Providing appropriate programs and services to intervene with juveniles currently involved in the juvenile justice system.
- ◆ Providing appropriate programs and services designed to deter at-risk juveniles from delinquent behavior.
- ◆ Increasing the safety and security of the community and its children by reducing juvenile crime.
- ◆ Eliminating duplication of services.
- ◆ Coordinating efforts to share resources and training programs.

The contents of interagency agreements underscore the commitment of each agency to offer a maximum degree of cooperation and planning to achieve the group objectives. Typically these agencies agree to participate in interagency planning and development meetings, assign staff to participate in consolidated case management systems where feasible, develop internal policies and procedures to implement the agreement to the fullest extent, and comply with Federal and State laws in implementing the agreement.

Other provisions of the agreement may identify the unique role of each agency. Law enforcement officials might agree, for example, to promptly notify other agencies when juveniles are arrested for truancy or certain violent crimes. The juvenile court might agree to provide periodic information on the disposition of cases or seek input from agencies on dispositional alternatives. The probation office might agree to share information about the move of a juvenile offender into or out of the jurisdiction and the terms, if any, of probation. Other agencies might be willing to share information on the achievement, behavioral, and attendance history of juvenile offenders to improve assessment and proper treatment. Educators might also agree to make referrals to appropriate agencies when students or staff commit certain offenses or exhibit at-risk behavior. (See sample interagency agreement in appendix D.)

Legal Considerations

Relevant Federal and State record confidentiality laws can resolve potential legal problems that arise in connection with interagency agreements. Laws that govern the activities of each State agency may also create standards for information sharing. Policies on juvenile record information vary greatly from State to State. For example, some States treat juvenile court records as public information (see Washington Revised Code 13.50.050; 13.50.010). Other States permit access to court records only by the juvenile and the agencies directly involved in the juvenile justice system. Most States use a method of conditional disclosure of juvenile court records in which a judge permits access to agencies that are not a part of the juvenile justice system by court order (see Pennsylvania Revised Code 6307, 6308).

State law may occasionally require local agencies to share information. Some States direct law enforcement units to report arrest information to schools when the arrest involves violent offenses of an enrolled student (see Florida Statutes 39.045). Other States require the formation of interagency teams for specific purposes (see Illinois Statutes, Chapter 75, Section 405/1–8.2). State law may also regulate the disclosure of records that other child care agencies maintain on juveniles. These laws should be consulted as well. All agencies are vital components of a comprehensive local strategy to combat juvenile delinquency. Those interested in developing a comprehensive local strategy should identify State laws that frustrate strategies of local teams to share files of record information and advocate for their appropriate reform. Statutes from Florida and Illinois (see appendix E) illustrate comprehensive legislative approaches to delinquency prevention designed to both prevent delinquency and intervene in the lives of at-risk juveniles.

An Effective Program Based on Multiagency Agreements: the Serious Habitual Offender Comprehensive Action Program

A current example of multiagency agreements that unify community resources to improve the delivery of services to juveniles is the Serious Habitual Offender Comprehensive Action Program (SHOCAP). When research indicated that a small proportion of offenders commit most serious and violent juvenile crime, OJJDP introduced the Serious Habitual Offender/Drug-Involved Program in 1983. SHOCAP, which grew out of those initial efforts, seeks to improve public safety by involving those agencies working within the juvenile justice system, for example, law enforcement, prosecution, education, probation, corrections, and social services in a cooperative process to share information and manage juvenile justice system agency cases. The program provides the structure for focusing attention on serious habitual offenders (SHO's) and enhances the quality and relevance of information exchanged through active interagency collaboration.

SHOCAP has four main goals:

- ◆ To provide a structured, coordinated juvenile justice system focus on habitual juvenile offenders.
- ◆ To establish specific juvenile justice policies that enhance the effectiveness of system procedures for handling habitual juvenile offenders.
- ◆ To promote public safety by identifying, tracking, arresting, and prosecuting the most violent habitual juvenile offenders.
- ◆ To identify pre-Serious Habitual Offender juveniles (pre-SHO's) and provide early intervention services designed to prevent these juveniles' development into SHO's.

In short, SHOCAP identifies a community's most dangerous and violent juvenile offenders and focuses community resources on immediate and aggressive intervention, including detention, vertical prosecution, and enhanced sentences when they offend or reoffend. The program prevents youth from falling through the cracks by ensuring that relevant case information is made available immediately for juvenile justice decisionmakers. With increased interagency cooperation and information sharing, SHOCAP provides a framework for more efficient service delivery by reducing duplicate services. This increased efficiency allows SHOCAP programs to establish additional early intervention and treatment resources for pre-SHO youth before they become more serious habitual offenders.

Examples of Valid Disclosures Under FERPA—Ronald

Ronald has been involved in several strong-arm robberies and is at risk of becoming a career criminal offender. The county SHOCAP program designates Ronald as a serious habitual offender and develops a supervision and treatment program. He is required to go to school each day, attend a jobs program three times a week, and go to counseling. Nothing in FERPA restricts Ronald's school from receiving information regarding his SHO status. If there is a State law authorizing information sharing with juvenile justice system agencies, Ronald's school can assist in the treatment program by sharing information from his education record about his attendance, performance, and behavior with other agencies providing supervision and services to Ronald.

Florida is developing a statewide SHOCAP program. The program involves a Federal and State partnership: selected county sites receive SAFE POLICY training, provided by OJJDP, and technical assistance, provided by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement. Currently there are 26 SHOCAP sites in Florida with 5 additional sites scheduled for implementation in 1997. For more information regarding SHOCAP, please refer to "Sources of Technical Assistance," p. 21.

Schools are indispensable partners in effective SHOCAP programs because adjudicated offenders who are not placed in detention are likely to return to campus. As noted previously, where State law authorizes or directs disclosures, educators should be advised when alleged juvenile offenders return to the school population and given appropriate information about the youth's offense and current status. Educators can assist in this partnership, to the extent authorized by Federal and State law, by providing information to supervising agencies to better assess the rehabilitation process by tracking attendance, academic achievement, and in-school behavior.

Conclusion

Educators can supply valuable information to other agencies in a delinquency prevention network. In an ideal information sharing system, a lively, two-way exchange of information occurs with educators actively involved in the process. In this type of system, each agency in the jurisdiction talks and listens. The juveniles about whom they share a common interest benefit from the synergy that unfolds.

Schools that operate outside the juvenile justice system agency information network are at the same disadvantage as juvenile justice systems that operate without school input. Disruptive and sometimes dangerous youth are placed back onto campuses and into school classrooms as a condition of court-ordered supervision without proper notification and assessment of their needs, often with problems beyond the expertise available in the traditional school.

Students, faculty, and staff are placed at risk as the school phase of probation unfolds without any realistic hope of proper supervision because school officials were not informed of the particular information they needed to best serve the juvenile and protect other students, faculty, and staff. Juvenile offenders may be tempted to turn their invisibility on campus into license for further lawlessness and disruptive conduct.

It would be hard to overstate the need for educators to share and receive information about student conduct. There is no doubt, however, that without meaningful information sharing between youth-serving agencies, all the efforts of these agencies working independently will not be enough to give the Nation's children safe, nurturing environments in which to grow.

Sources of Technical Assistance

U.S. Department of Education

One source of technical assistance is the Department of Education's recent publication entitled Strong Families, Strong Schools: Building Community Partnerships For Learning. As this booklet points out, research has shown that greater family involvement in children's learning is a critical link to achieving a high-quality education and a safe, disciplined learning environment for every student. Strong Families, Strong Schools is available from the Department of Education (800-USA-LEARN).

The Department of Education encourages families and schools to team up to make schools safer—a precondition for learning—by establishing family-school-community partnerships to make safe schools a priority. Although FERPA does not allow schools to share information on students with other parents, schools can designate parents serving on a school or interagency committee designed to address juvenile delinquency as school officials with a legitimate educational interest. The sample FERPA notification of rights to parents and students in appendix B includes language to cover this situation.

Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Information Sharing Initiatives

OJJDP's training and technical assistance programs stress the importance of interagency information sharing. The School Administrators for Effective Police, Prosecution, Probation Operations Leading to Improved Children and Youth Services Program (SAFE POLICY) is a week-long program directed at reducing juvenile violence in schools. The program stresses improved use of information by developing interagency agreements that call for information sharing and coordination of juvenile services.

The Chief Executive Officer Course is an intensive 1-day orientation for local executives of public and private agencies that emphasizes information sharing as a method for improving the juvenile justice system.

The Serious Habitual Offender Comprehensive Action Program (SHOCAP) is presented as a module in the SAFE POLICY and Chief Executive Training programs and is also available in a 40-hour course designed to assist a SHOCAP jurisdiction in developing its own unique interagency information sharing agreement. The course requires the participation of policy level officials from law enforcement, schools, juvenile detention/corrections, prosecution, and social services.

Each of these courses has a module on laws and policies that affect information sharing. They will use this Guide as a resource for future presentations. The courses also teach techniques and methods designed to maximize information sharing. Sample State legislation, consent policies, and judicial orders are also available to course participants.

In addition, OJJDP can provide direct technical assistance upon request to individual jurisdictions working on improving their information sharing.

Educators, remember:

1. Notify parents and eligible students annually of their rights under FERPA.
2. Notify parents and eligible students annually of “directory information” designated by the school.
3. Identify school officials and criteria for legitimate educational interests in the annual notification of rights.
4. Designate a school official as the school’s “law enforcement official,” if you do not have a law enforcement unit.
5. Disclose education records only with parental consent or under one of the exceptions in FERPA.
6. Provide parents and eligible students access to education records within 45 days of request.
7. The definition of “education records” under FERPA encompasses all records that contain information on a student and are maintained by a school, except those records specifically exempted by law.
8. Give notice to parents or eligible students, when appropriate, of a court order or subpoena for education records before compliance.
9. Inform third parties of 5-year penalty for redisclosure of education records without parental consent.
10. Keep records of disclosures to third parties.

This provision applies to—

- (1) Any educational agency or institution; and
- (2) Any State educational agency (SEA) and its components.
 - (i) For the purposes of subpart B of this part, an SEA and its components constitute an educational agency or institution.

(Authority: 20 U.S.C. 1232g(a)(1)(A) and (B))

§ 99.11 May an educational agency or institution charge a fee for copies of education records?

(ii) The waiver is made in writing and signed by the student, regardless of age.

(2) If a student has waived his or her rights under paragraph (b)(3)(i) of this section, the educational institution shall:

(i) Give the student, on request, the names of the individuals who provided the letters and statements of recommendation; and

(ii) Use the letters and statements of recommendation only for the purpose for which they were intended.

Appendix B: Model Notification of Rights Under FERPA for Elementary and Secondary Institutions

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) affords parents and students over 18 years of age (“eligible students”) certain rights with respect to the student’s education records. They are:

- (1) The right to inspect and review the student’s education records within 45 days of the day the District receives a request for access.

Parents or eligible students should submit to the school principal [or appropriate school official] a written request that identifies the record(s) they wish to inspect. The principal will make arrangements for access and notify the parent or eligible student of the time and place where the records may be inspected.

- (2) The right to request the amendment of the student’s education records that the parent or eligible student believes are inaccurate or misleading.

Parents or eligible students may ask Alpha School District to amend a record that they believe is inaccurate or misleading. They should write the school principal, clearly identify the part of the record they want changed, and specify why it is inaccurate or misleading.

If the District decides not to amend the record as requested by the parent or eligible student, the District will notify the parent or eligible student of the decision and advise them of their right to a hearing regarding the request for amendment. Additional information regarding the hearing procedures will be provided to the parent or eligible student when notified of the right to a hearing.

- (3) The right to consent to disclosures of personally identifiable information contained in the student’s education records, except to the extent that FERPA authorizes disclosure without consent.

One exception which permits disclosure without consent is disclosure to school officials with legitimate educational interests. A school official is a person employed by the District as an administrator, supervisor, instructor, or support staff member (including health or medical staff and law enforcement unit personnel); a person serving on the School Board; a person or company with whom the District has contracted to perform a special task (such as an attorney, auditor, medical consultant, or therapist); or a parent or student serving on an official committee, such as a disciplinary or grievance committee, or assisting another school official in performing his or her tasks.

A school official has a legitimate educational interest if the official needs to review an education record in order to fulfill his or her professional responsibility.

[Optional] Upon request, the District discloses education records without consent to officials of another school district in which a student seeks or intends to enroll. [NOTE: FERPA requires a school district to make a reasonable attempt to notify the student of the records request unless it states in its annual notification that it intends to forward records on request.]

- (4) The right to file a complaint with the U.S. Department of Education concerning alleged failures by the District to comply with the requirements of FERPA. The Office that administers FERPA is:

Family Policy Compliance Office
U.S. Department of Education
600 Independence Avenue SW.
Washington, DC 20202-4605

[NOTE: In addition, a school may want to include its directory information public notice, as required by § 99.37 of the regulations, with its annual notification of rights under FERPA.]

Cautions for Model Interagency Agreement

As educators and juvenile justice professionals work on developing interagency information sharing agreements, they should ensure that the laws of their State permit information and record sharing. Further, the interagency agreement should contain a clause prohibiting the release of information to third parties not covered by the agreement.

405/1-8.1. Legislative findings

s. 1-8.1. Legislative findings.

(a) The General Assembly finds that a substantial and disproportionate amount of serious crime is committed by a relatively small number of juvenile offenders, otherwise known as serious habitual offenders. By this amendatory Act of 1992, the General Assembly intends to support the efforts of the juvenile justice system comprised of law enforcement, state's attorneys, probation departments, juvenile courts, social service providers, and schools in the early identification and treatment of habitual juvenile offenders. The General Assembly further supports increased interagency efforts to gather comprehensive data and actively disseminate the data to the agencies in the juvenile justice system to produce more informed decisions by all entities in that system.

(b) The General Assembly finds that the establishment of a Serious Habitual Offender Comprehensive Action Program throughout the State of Illinois is necessary to effectively intensify the supervision of serious habitual juvenile offenders in the community and to enhance current rehabilitative efforts. A cooperative and coordinated multi-disciplinary approach will increase the opportunity for success with juvenile offenders and assist in the development of early intervention strategies.

405/1-8.2. Cooperation of agencies; Serious Habitual Offender Comprehensive Action Program

s. 1-8.2. Cooperation of agencies; Serious Habitual Offender Comprehensive Action Program.

(a) The Serious Habitual Offender Comprehensive Action Program (SHOCAP) is a multi-disciplinary interagency case management and information sharing system that enables the juvenile justice system, schools, and social service agencies to make more informed decisions regarding a small number of juveniles who repeatedly commit serious delinquent acts.

(b) Each county in the State of Illinois may establish a multi-disciplinary agency (SHOCAP) committee. The committee shall consist of representatives from the following agencies: local law enforcement, area school district, state's attorney's office, and court services (probation). The chairman may appoint additional members to the committee as deemed appropriate to accomplish the goals of this program, including, but not limited to, representatives from the juvenile detention center, mental health, the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, and community representatives at large.

(c) The SHOCAP committee shall adopt, by a majority of the members:

- (1) criteria that will identify those who qualify as a serious habitual juvenile offender; and
- (2) a written interagency information sharing agreement to be signed by the chief executive officer of each of the agencies represented on the committee. The interagency information sharing agreement shall include a provision that requires that all records pertaining to a serious habitual offender (SHO) shall be confidential. Disclosure of information may be made to other staff from member agencies as authorized by the SHOCAP committee for the furtherance of case management and tracking of the SHO. Staff from the member agencies who receive this information shall be governed by the confidentiality provisions of this Act. The staff from the member agencies who will qualify to have access to the SHOCAP information must be limited to those individuals who provide direct services to the SHO or who provide supervision of the SHO.

(d) The Chief Juvenile Circuit Judge, or the Chief Circuit Judge, or his designee, may issue a comprehensive information sharing court order. The court order shall allow agencies who are represented on the SHOCAP committee and whose chief executive officer has signed the interagency information sharing agreement to provide and disclose information to the SHOCAP committee. The sharing of information will ensure the coordination and cooperation of all agencies represented in providing case management and enhancing the effectiveness of the SHOCAP efforts.

(e) Any person or agency who is participating in good faith in the sharing of SHOCAP information under this Act shall have immunity from any liability, civil, criminal, or otherwise, that might result by reason of the type of information exchanged. For the purpose of any proceedings, civil or criminal, the good faith of any person or agency permitted to share SHOCAP information under this Act shall be presumed.

(f) All reports concerning SHOCAP clients made available to members of the SHOCAP committee and all records generated from these reports shall be confidential and shall not be disclosed, except as specifically authorized by this Act or other applicable law. It is a Class A misdemeanor to permit, assist, or encourage the unauthorized release of any information contained in SHOCAP reports or records.

CHAPTER 39 PROCEEDINGS
RELATING TO JUVENILES
PART II DELINQUENCY CASES
Fla. Stat. @ 39.045 (1995)

39.045 Oaths; records; confidential information.

- (1) Authorized agents of the Department of Juvenile Justice may administer oaths and affirmations.
- (2) The clerk of the court shall make and keep records of all cases brought before it pursuant to this part. The court shall preserve the records pertaining to a child charged with committing a delinquent act or violation of law until the child reaches 24 years of age or reaches 26 years of age if he or she is a serious or habitual delinquent child, until 5 years after the last entry was made, or until 3 years after the death of the child, whichever is earlier, and may then destroy them, except that records made of traffic offenses in which there is no allegation of delinquency may be destroyed as soon as this can be reasonably accomplished. The court shall make official records of all petitions and orders filed in a case arising pursuant to this part and of any other pleadings, certificates, proofs of publication, summonses, warrants, and writs that are filed pursuant to the case.
- (3) Records maintained by the Department of Juvenile Justice, including copies of records maintained by the court, which pertain to a child found to have committed a delinquent act which, if committed by an adult, would be a crime specified in ss. 110.1127, 393.0655, 394.457, 397.451, n1 402.305(1), 409.175, and 409.176 may not be destroyed pursuant to this section, except in cases of the death of the child. Such records, however, shall be sealed by the court for use only in meeting the screening requirements for personnel in s. 402.3055 and the other sections cited above, or pursuant to departmental rule. The information shall be released to those persons specified in the above cited sections for the purposes of complying with those sections. The court may punish by contempt any person who releases or uses the records for any unauthorized purpose.

(4) The clerk shall keep all official records required by this section separate from other records of the circuit court, except those records pertaining to motor vehicle violations, which shall be forwarded to the Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles. Except as provided in subsection (9), official records required by this part are not open to inspection by the public, but may be inspected only upon order of the court by persons deemed by the court to have a proper interest therein, except that a child and the parents, guardians, or legal custodians of the child and their attorneys, law enforcement agencies, the Department of Juvenile Justice and its designees, the Parole Commission, and the Department of Corrections shall always have the right to inspect and copy any official record pertaining to the child. The court may permit authorized representatives of recognized organizations compiling statistics for proper purposes to inspect, and make abstracts from, official records under whatever conditions upon the use and disposition of such records the court may deem proper and may punish by contempt proceedings any violation of those conditions.

(5) Except as provided in subsections (3) and (8), all information obtained under this part in the discharge of official duty by any judge, any employee of the court, any authorized agent of the Department of Juvenile Justice, the Parole Commission, the Juvenile Justice Advisory Board, the Department of Corrections, the district juvenile justice boards, any law enforcement agent, or any licensed professional or licensed community agency representative participating in the assessment or treatment of a juvenile is confidential and may be disclosed only to the authorized personnel of the court, the Department of Juvenile Justice and its designees, the Department of Corrections, the Parole Commission, the Juvenile Justice Advisory Board, law enforcement agents, school superintendents and their designees, any licensed professional or licensed community agency representative participating in the assessment or treatment of a juvenile, and others entitled under this part to receive that information, or upon order of the court.

Within each county, the sheriff, the chiefs of police, the district school superintendent, and the department shall enter into an interagency agreement for the purpose of sharing information about juvenile offenders among all parties. The agreement must specify the conditions under which summary criminal history information is to be made available to appropriate school personnel, and the conditions under which school records are to be made available to appropriate department personnel. The agencies entering into such agreement must comply with s. 943.0525, and must maintain the confidentiality of information that is otherwise exempt from s. 119.07(1), as provided by law.

(6) All orders of the court entered pursuant to this part must be in writing and signed by the judge, except that the clerk or deputy clerk may sign a summons or notice to appear.

(7) A court record of proceedings under this part is not admissible in evidence in any other civil or criminal proceeding, except that:

(a) Orders transferring a child for trial as an adult are admissible in evidence in the court in which he or she is tried, but create no presumption as to the guilt of the child; nor may such orders be read to, or commented upon in the presence of, the jury in any trial.

(b) Orders binding an adult over for trial on a criminal charge, made by the judge as a committing magistrate, are admissible in evidence in the court to which the adult is bound over.

(c) Records of proceedings under this part forming a part of the record on appeal must be used in the appellate court in the manner provided in s. 39.069(4).

(d) Records are admissible in evidence in any case in which a person is being tried upon a charge of having committed perjury, to the extent such records are necessary to prove the charge.

(e) Records of proceedings under this part may be used to prove disqualification pursuant to ss. 39.076, 110.1127, 393.0655, 394.457, 397.451, 402.305, 402.313, 409.175, and 409.176, and for proof in a chapter 120 proceeding pursuant to ss. 415.1075 and n2 415.504.

(8) (a) Records regarding children are not open to inspection by the public. Such records may be inspected only upon order of the Secretary of Juvenile Justice or his or her authorized agent by persons who have sufficient reason and upon such conditions for their use and disposition as the secretary or his or her authorized agent deems proper. The information in such records may be disclosed only to other employees of the Department of Juvenile Justice who have a need therefor in order to perform their official duty; to other persons as authorized by rule of the Department of Juvenile Justice; and, upon request, to the Juvenile Justice Advisory Board and the Department of Corrections. The secretary or his or her authorized agent may permit properly qualified persons to inspect and make abstracts from records for statistical purposes under whatever conditions upon their use and disposition the secretary or his or her authorized agent deems proper, provided adequate assurances are given that children's names and other identifying information will not be disclosed by the applicant.

(b) The destruction of records pertaining to children committed to or supervised by the Department of Juvenile Justice pursuant to a court order, which records are retained until a child reaches the age of 24 years or until a serious or habitual delinquent child reaches the age of 26 years, shall be subject to chapter 943.

(9) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this part, a law enforcement agency may release for publication the name, photograph, and address of a child taken into custody if the child has been taken into custody by a law enforcement officer for a violation of law which, if committed by an adult, would be a felony, or the name, photograph, and address of any child who has been found by a court to have committed three or more violations of law which, if committed by an adult, would be misdemeanors.

(10) This part does not prohibit the release of the juvenile offense report by a law enforcement agency to the victim of the offense.

(11) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, when a child of any age is taken into custody by a law enforcement officer for an offense that would have been a felony if committed by an adult, or a crime of violence, the law enforcement agency must notify the superintendent of schools that the child is alleged to have committed the delinquent act. Upon notification, the principal is authorized to begin disciplinary actions pursuant to s. 232.26. The information obtained by the superintendent of schools pursuant to this section must be released within 48 hours after receipt to appropriate school personnel, including the principal of the school of the child. The principal must immediately notify the child's immediate classroom teachers.
